the health of the community and this matter of resisting typhoid is of most vital importance—a consensus of opipion ought to carry its legitimate weight. It seems to us a pity that the Governor has not yet turned the Medical Board bodily into the fold of the Sanitary Board, as we suggested a month or two since. The question of quaranting would then receive a far better chance of impartial discussion, and be recent serious inroad of typhoid would very speedily be dealt with in a vigorous manuer. If it be in early contemplation to do all that Mr. Chadwick has suggested regarding the ventilation of the sewers on the bigher levels, then the community can rest satisfied that the chances of typhoid holding its ground are sensibly reduced. It ought to be realised by the unofficial members of Council as a clear duty to find out the reason why, if these suggestions are not carried out very soon. Here are a few sentences which may serve to refresh the memories of all concerned, it being borns in mind that most of the cases of typhoid among European residents took place on the higher levels. Badly-constructed housedrains and badly ventilated main sewers

On the first question,-Mr Chadwick says - I am of opinion that the laws which affect house construction and sanitation are inadequate and require thorough revision, and that a complete and stringent system of sanitary inspection is necessary to introduce and en-force improvement.

were given as the predisposing causes.

The power to enforce improvement has not been given to the proper authorities as yet, the reason for which every one concerned serms to leave to some. body else. A Health Ordinance is now regarded as a grim short of a joke! Speaking of the street drains, Mr Chadwick again writes:---

There are no special ventilating openings either inlet or outlet, nor does the necessity for ventilation appear to have been recognised. The drains which receive the waters of ravines above the town have open mouths at their upper ends or intakes, and so they are to some extent ventilated. Where the drain does not run up to the hill side there is no proper ventilation. For instance, the drain along Old Baily Street terminating in Caine Road, In one instance, that in Peel Street, the natural ventilation of the sewer has been prevented purposely by the construction of a trap at top. Thus the uprising sewer-gas has no means of escape except by untrapped house drains and gulley holes.

-So that the more the street drains are trapped the more dangerous become those inside the houses of the residents on that line. To remove this two-fold evil, Mr. Chadwick suggests the following:--

Of House Drains he says : Methods and appliances are known and have stood the test of experience, whereby the danger in question may be wholly obviated. They are neither expensive nor complicated, and require little or no special mechanism, but only the skilful application of certain principles to the use of well-known and generally available materials and appliances.

coupled with good workmanship. On the Ventilation he writes :---

In any case, it is obviously necessary that all main sewers should be carried back, up the slopes of the hill, well above the town, and there terminate in open mouths. Further, to promote a current of air, their in. takes should be made in the form of vertical shafts constructed in the masonry of the dams, which are proposed to form the catchpits at the head of the newers. For complete ventilation also inlets at the lower extremities of the sewers near the Prays will be required. They must be so arranged as not to be closed by the rising tide. If

A PATAL assidend occurred yesterday morning to a Chinaman, on the Canton Wharf. The deceased, whose name is at present un known, appears to have endeavoured to get on board the Canton boat on some pretence or another, and on being refused admission ran violently down the gangway of the steamer and fell against one of the posts on the Wharf, receiving a severe fracture of the frontal bone, from the effects of which he shortly afterwards expired. An inquest will probably be held on the body of deceased on Monday next.

ENGLAND'S DEPENCES. London: July 17.—A conference of the Empire Defence League was held this morning in the Mansion House. Lord Lennox presided, and the Mayors of many prominent towns were present. Resolutions were adopted which declared that the defensive resources of the empire were inadequate and urged the Government to strengthen the navy for the purpose of protecting the coast and fertify colonial posts and coaling stations and appoint a commission to inquire into the relative strength of the British and foreign navies. A deputation of important citizens, headed by the Lord Mayor, called upon Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty, to-day and urged the necessity strengthening the navy, and Lord George in reply said : 'The Government' intended to secure the best professional opinion as to the actual condition of the navy. If these advisers decide that the navy is at present efficient the Government would give that assurance to the public to allay alarm. If on the hand it should be found by these advisors that the navy lacked in efficiency and that active steps were necessary to attengthen it. the Government would not hesitate to ask Parliament for funds necessary to place England foremost among the maritime powers.

CHINESE RESTRICTION. New York. July 11.—The Herald's Ottawa special says: The Chinese Restriction bill now before Parliament has been amended by the Government providing that so far as it applied to Chinese coming from the United States it shall go into effect one month after it has received the assent of the General Government, while as applied to Chinese immigrants coming direct from China it shall not go into operation until January. The bill provides a tax of $50 on all Chinese landing in Canada except Government representatives tourists, merchants, students and men of Canada. This, he says, would enable the United States Government to do away with much of the voluminous machinery they now require to keep the country from being flooded with the Chinese. Before the bill now under consideration could be introduced permission had to be obtained from the British Government, as there was a possibility that such restrictive measures in excluding Chinese would interfere with the friendly relations which exist between China and Great Britain. Toronto, July 16 .- At a public meeting last night, the Mayor presiding, resolutions were passed that the further admission of Chinese into Canada should be rigidly restricted, if not totally prohibited, and that the Senate accord to the act now before it, entitled 'An Act to restrict and regulate Chinese immigration to Canada, its sanction so that it may become a law. If the Teuton and the Slav can keep friends, the world is theirs; and if not, there will be the most terrible struggle recorded in history since the white barbarians fought the white Romans and their darker allies. We are not sure that an agreement is possible until a great fight has taken place, for Slav and Teuton seem unwilling to comprehend each other, though there is not between them the internecine hatred sometimes observed in history; but if their statesmen could arrange terms on which the conflict could be permanently avoided, a huge mass of misery might be saved to our immediate descendants. To avoid the quarrel will be difficult, for the Slav is just now strangled; and to reach the open water, and so take his natural part in the greater thovement of mankind, he must pitch himself on somebody, be it on Turkey, or England, or Uhina: but the means of avoidance are worth the study and patience of years. Mankind is not very likely to be happy when all is done, for in all this movement is no cure for sin, or pain, or poverty auxiety increases as fast as intelligence, and sympathy—which means suffering, faster
